Chef can help with the meal

IMPRESSING friends and family by hosting the ultimate dinner party may not come naturally to everyone, but help is at hand.

Danny Jimminson, head chef and owner of the Hammer and Pincers in Wymeswold, has decided to share his culinary expertise as part of a new cookery master class which takes place in the students' home.

Danny said the inspiration for this new venture came about through a loyal customer who had lost his sight, but was passionate about food.

Master classes are designed for up to six students, and give students the chance to produce an impressive three courses.

"I want the students to enjoy the process of cooking a meal. With a little confidence and good ingredients, I believe I can change the most reluctant of cooks into a budding gourmet: some people just need to be given a little enthusiasm."
